SOCIETY NEWS AND NOTES

Recent Meetings

At the meeting on April 24 Linda Ramsey Ashley spoke on doing research in Kentucky. She is assistant editor of the Kentucky Ancestors Magazine, a genealogical quarterly published by the Kentucky Historical Society.

Mrs. Ashley began by saying that Frankfurt is a good place to go to begin research on Kentucky. The Kentucky Historical Society Library there has open shelves and open stacks. It has family history books, a card file of names from inquiries in the Kentucky Ancestors Magazine, and a file of correspondence received by the society. It has material on other states which had migration into Kentucky, and some on states with migration away from Kentucky. It has a large micrographic section with microfilms of all Virginia military warrants and Confederate pension papers, and all censuses through 1910.

Among projects being undertaken by the Kentucky Historical Society are a central index of names from the Kentucky Ancestors Magazine, with a cross index to include women's married and maiden names and including a slave index and denominational pastors' index, and a project to collect names from many small cemeteries which were being lost, to be printed out by county.

In Frankfurt also are a new archives building, which has records from the counties such as marriages, deeds and wills; and the National Guard Armory, which has military records, including some militia records from the Revolution and the War of 1812.

In Lexington at the University of Kentucky the Margaret I. King Library has central Kentucky church and county records, a newspaper collection, and a collection of the papers of Kentucky genealogists on microfilm.

Mrs. Ashley related a short history of the state, beginning with scattered settlements in the 1770s. The largest one-group migration to the state was a Baptist group of 500 from Spotsylvania County, Virginia, in 1781, and many Kentucky people are descended from them. Kentucky settlers were mostly Protestant, and from the Great Revival of 1803 in Bourbon County came the beginning of the Christian Church and the Church of Christ.

In the Civil War Kentucky had southern feeling but as a state did not join the Confederacy, and Kentucky men fought on both sides.

The meeting was informative and valuable to anyone interested in Kentucky, and Mrs. Ashley recommended that anyone doing research in Kentucky should join the Kentucky Historical Society.

Twenty years ago Ralph Muncy put an ad in a newspaper in Noble County, Ohio, regarding his ancestor Ephraim Bates of New Jersey, and received an answer from James Jessup of Lapeer County, Michigan. They have worked together during the intervening years, and at the GSWC meeting on May 22, Muncy and Jessup spoke about their preparations to publish the information they have accumulated on their common ancestor, to make it accessible to other members of their family and to ensure preservation of their material.

Important concerns in undertaking publication are to be sure of the accuracy of your information, to document every fact (or list the source if you can't document), and to make an index so people can find information easily. It is important to make a cut-off point for collecting information, in order to ensure that the job wil be undertaken. Photographs are desirable, and putting them together on separate pages is more economical. They advised using maps to show places and migrations. Reproduction can be by various methods, even Xerox or microfilm, and the printer should be consulted about problems.

Considerable interest was shown in the subject of a numbering system, a necessary consideration if you are undertaking publication of a book, and they recommended use of the "registry" system explained in Creating a Worthwhile Family Genealogy by Meredith Colket.

We met on June 26 at the home of Frank and Betty Hess for the annual picnic meeting. After the potluck lunch everyone shared their most difficult problems with the group.

THIRD NATIONAL GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY CONFERENCE

By Laura Hawke

There were over 1000 attendees at the third National Genealogical Society Conference held in Fort Worth, Texas, April 13-16, 1983, with approximately half of them from Texas. This did tend to slant more of the topics and exhibits toward Texas or Southern interests and made it more difficult to find individuals with Eastern and Northern ancestry.

Thursday was library day for me. University of Michigan Dean, Russell Bidlack, gave an excellent speech on "The Awakening: Genealogy as It Relates to Library Service." Dean Bidlack pointed out the changes in attitude toward genealogists. It was not until after World War II that genealogy became important to both public and state libraries. This hobby also attracted more and more younger genealogists as time passed. Publications have vastly increased - first done for love and now for profit. Bidlack also mentioned the University of Michigan's collection of 2000 plus rolls of microfilms on pensions.

The second speech was, "The Challenge: Assisting Genealogists in Libraries - Reference and Referral" ably presented by a panel moderated by Lloyd D. Bockstruck, head of the genealogy section of the Dallas Public Library. This was followed by "The Harvest: Genealogists Assisting Libraries" presented by Paul Campbell of the Fort Worth Public Library. His library has a budget of $8,000 per year supplemented by $10,000 in gifts from the Genealogy Society. The Fort Worth Genealogy Society also appeared en masse at the City Council saving the City Library's Fort Worth Genealogy Department.

A BIOGRAPHICAL AND HISTORICAL SKETCH OF NORTHFIELD TOWNSHIP

Jeanne B. Ransom

Northfield Township in Washtenaw County has always been of special interest to me as it was where many of my ancestors on my father's side settled when they came west to Michigan from New England. My father, Wilber E. Bailey, of Lansing and his cousin, William T. Groves, of Ann Arbor, now both deceased, spent many years researching and writing their family histories.

Northfield Township is located due north of Ann Arbor and just west of Salem Township. In the early days it was noted for its lakes, marshes, wilderness and Indians. It was organized in 1832, five years before Michigan became a state.

There were two distinct groups that settled in the early years of Northfield Township. The Irish Catholics were in the large majority. Most of them came from the old country and settled in the western part of the township. They were the "Clancys, Donagans, Foheys, Gibneys, O'Briens, O'Connors, Burkes, Purtells, Ryans and the Walls". In early times Northfield was known as "New Ireland."

The other people who settled in the township were "The Yankees." They settled in the eastern part and came mainly from New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. Most of them were of English descent, some from Puritan families. They were the "Appletons, Birds, Brokaws, Brundages, Coys, Groves, Lelands, Sessions, Renwicks and the Suttons."

One of the early settlers was Nicholas Groves who was born on George Washington's 55th birthday, February 22, 1788, in Vermont where his father, Jesse Groves, had settled after the American Revolution. When Nicholas was nine years old, Jesse and Martha (Parley) Groves moved with Nicholas and his four older siblings back to Massachusetts, where the Groves family originally had settled in the 1670s. There Jesse purchased a farm in East Charlemont on the Mohawk Trail, and on this farm Nicholas grew up. In 1816, he married Roxanna Stearns, daughter of Levi and Lois (Stoddard) Stearns and to them were born four children: Ann, born 1817, William Parley, born 1819, Martha, born 1821 and Roxa, born 1824. It was at the birth of Roxa that Nicholas' wife died. Shortly thereafter he married Clarinda Holbrook and their daughter, Harriet, was born in 1826. Nicholas had inherited the farm after the death of his father, Jesse, in 1819.

Many farmers were selling their farms and moving east after the Erie Canal opened and Nicholas was eager to do the same. The Stearns, having already lost their daughter, thought it would be very foolish and very unhealthy to take such young children to the west since Michigan was "nothing more than fever and ague."

However, a neighbor had moved to Michigan and urged Nicholas to come. In the fall of 1831, Nicholas Groves came to Northfield Township, located his 160 acres, purchased it from the U.S. Government for $10. an acre, then he returned to Massachusetts. There he packed his belongings, sold his livestock, and hired passage for his family and household goods to be drawn overland to Albany. There they reloaded on a canal boat to Buffalo and then took the boat to Detroit, where teamsters were ready to take them on one of the wagons to Northfield Township. This was a two day journey through the marshes and wilderness. The weather was rainy and the roads muddy and they had no cabin built so they moved in with their neighbor, the Renwicks, who had settled there a few years earlier.

The children were not well. They had left Martha in Massachusetts with her maternal grandparents, the Stearns. Roxa and William were not healthy children but they all helped set up their new home. William's health seemed to improve as he helped his father clear the land, cut the logs, build the cabin, dig the well and put up the barn. Another child, Cordelia was born in 1835. There were many hardships and they did get the "fever and ague." Roxa, who was born when her mother died, was never in good health and in 1843 at the age of 18, she died. She was one of the first persons to be buried in Leland Cemetery.

William, the only son of Nicholas, wanted to leave home. He felt his stepmother was too demanding in her discipline and treated him as a child, but his father promised him the farm would be his if he stayed. Before long the fields were cleared, fences put up, livestock secured, grain planted, horses added to the oxen and an apple orchard set out. The log cabin was replaced in 1846 by a frame dwelling and several wings were added in 1856, 1877 and 1887. It was destroyed by fire in 1922 and a new house constructed on the site. This homestead remained in the family for several generations.

Nicholas' wife, Clarinda, died August 26, 1845 and Nicholas died suddenly after a fall in his home March 4, 1866. They were both buried in Leland Cemetery.

The church played an important role in the lives of the early settlers. In 1832 Rev. Alvin Billings, a Methodist minister, preached at the Murray schoolhouse and in 1833 organized a class consisting of Isaac Burhans and several others. Another class was later organized at the Matthews schoolhouse. These two classes united to form the First Methodist Church of Northfield, and a building was erected in 1847 at the corner of N. Territorial and Earhart Roads, just one mile east of the Groves homestead. This became known as Leland's Corners and many of the early settlers are buried in the Leland Cemetery. This church was on the South Lyon charge in the 1860s with James Castor as pastor. In 1874, Salem and Northfield became a part of the Ann Arbor district keeping the same pastor. By 1884 it was on the Detroit District with J. J. Mills as pastor. In 1894 Rev. William Benton was pastor and in 1904 John Wilson, pastor, received $4,500. cash salary with Leland's fifty members paying $250. By 1909 there were only 36 members and in 1914 only 18. The Leland church is not mentioned in the minutes of the 1916 Detroit Conference. The church and original school at Leland's Corners have been torn down, but the cemetery still stands.

The first town meeting was held at Benjamin Sutton's house in April 1833. Nicholas Groves was there and was elected Overseer of the Poor. By 1837 Northfield had a population of 793 but this was to grow to 1300 by 1870.

At some time, 1840-1860, a plank road was built out from Ann Arbor to Whitmore Lake as far as Section 20 of Northfield Township. This was a toll road for many years over which ran the Ann Arbor and Howell Stage Line. There were various taverns along this road and the junction of what is now called the Whitmore Lake Road and old Territorial Road was the location of a large tavern, a blacksmith shop and several houses. This little hamlet became known as Multoph Corners and the tavern became the center for town meetings. Many stories are told of the fist fights that took place there between the Irish and the Yankees.

Sometime between 1840 and 1845 the government established a post office at the Groves homestead. It was known as "Lucerne." On December 10, 1849, William P. Groves, the son of Nicholas, was appointed postmaster, taking over from John Renwick who had been elected to the State Legislature. There was not much mail in those days. The cost was five cents to send a letter. The paper was folded to form an envelope which was sealed with wax and stamped with a figure five. Mail was carried by horseback and stories are told how the mailman would stop at the Groves' home, feed his horse and then eat his lunch on cold days before the fireplace. In 1853, after the patrons became more numerous, the post office was moved to the old Doty farm, known as "Gravel Run" where Mr. Doty was postmaster for several years until the building of the Ann Arbor Railroad.

All of the children of Nicholas Groves married except, of course, Roxa, whom we have mentioned as dying at age 18, and Martha, the daughter left in Massachusetts. She also died young at about age 16. Lois Ann, the oldest daughter of Nicholas and Roxanna (Stearns) Groves married Levi Burhans of Northfield. They had four children and lived in Portland, Michigan. Lois died in 1880 of consumption in Northfield and is buried in Leland Cemetery. Harriet, daughter of Nicholas and Clarinda Groves, married James Miller, had eight children and lived in Clare, Michigan. Cordelia, born in Northfield, married William Earl and had five children, two of whom homesteaded in South Dakota. Upon her husband's death she married Levi Burhans.

On October 2, 1851, William Parley Groves, the only son of Nicholas and Roxanna (Stearns) Groves, married Harriet FitzSimmons of Chemung County, New York. It is believed that Thomas FitzSimmons was a descendant of the Scoth-Irish FitzSimmons who came from Northern Ireland to Pennsylvania in the 1680s with William Penn. Thomas and Eliza brought their family from New York to Detroit and then about 1847 settled in Plymouth with her sister. They were in the census of Ann Arbor in 1870. They later moved four miles north on the Pontiac Trail to a log cabin but soon built a large stone house on their farm. Thomas FitzSimmons died in 1883 at the age of 82. His wife, Eliza, died in 1894. They are both buried in Leland Cemetery. Harriet, their daughter, was one of eleven children. These sons and daughters married into families with names as Renwick, Burd, Whitlark, Winans, Bartlett and Boylan, many of whom lived in the Northfield area and are buried in Leland Cemetery.

William Parley and Harriet (FitzSimmons) Groves lived on his father's homestead which he had inherited at the time of his father's death, and there their seven children were born and raised. Roxa Groves, the oldest, born in 1852, married Myron Francis Bailey. They were my grandparents. Albert, born in 1853, married Emma Louise Taylor. He died in 1924 and is buried in Leland Cemetery. Flora, born 1855, married Frank Duncan; Eliza, born 1857 married Edward Everett Bird; Harriet, born 1860 married twice-Wilford Yanson and later Louis Hammond; Edwin, born 1863 married Nellie McIntyre and Fanny, born 1866 did not marry. Many of these families made notable contributions to Washtenaw County and to Ann Arbor. Much of the material in this sketch was secured from papers belonging to Albert's son, William Taylor Groves, who inherited the family homestead. This family still has descendants in the Ann Arbor area. Frank Duncan, Edward Bird and Wilford Yanson all had farms in Northfield Township.

William Parley Groves was very active in community affairs and a prominent businessman. For several years he was an officer in School Dictrict No. 6. He was one of the founders of the Northfield Grange. He was one of the original stockholders of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Northern Michigan Railroad which was completed in Ann Arbor in 1878, and he took an active part in the extension of that railroad north to South Lyons. He was one of the builders of the station house at Emery which was located on that railroad one mile east of the Groves' homestead. He was not a member of any church but attended and supported the Methodist Church of Northfield at Leland's Corners. He constructed the receiving vault that now stands in Leland Cemetery. He had one of the most productive apple orchards in Washtenaw County and was one of the founders in May, 1878, of the Washtenaw Pomological Society (later known as the Fruit Growers Association.)

About the time of the Civil War and for about thirty years thereafter, there was a steady immigration of German settlers who came directly from Germany. They were the "Kapps, Ludwicks, Prochnows, Garlocks, Kempfs and Bauers." In 1875 William P. Groves sold three acres of his land for the building of the St. John's German Lutheran Church, parsonage and cemetery. He was a strong abolitionist and gave large sums of money for the Union cause during the Civil War.

William P. Groves was also prominent in Ann Arbor where he held considerable real estate and was listed among the top twenty heaviest tax payers. At one time he owned the block where the Rackham Building of the University now stands. He offered it to the University for $10,000. but his offer was refused by the Board of Regents as not needed and too much money. He was one of the original donors of the present University School of Music and one of the original stockholders of the First National Bank of Ann Arbor.

Harriet (FitzSimmons) Groves died on January 18, 1892 at the age of 66. William Parley Groves died February 25, 1899 at the age of 79. They are both buried in Leland Cemetery.

Roxa Groves, the oldest child of William P. amd Harriet was married at the Groves' homestead to Myron Francis Bailey on New Year's day, 1873. Myron was the son of Isaac Franklin and Fannie (Parker) Bailey of Somerset Township, Niagara County, New York. Fannie was born in England and her parents had settled in Lockport, New York. The farm in Somerset was stony and unproductive. Isaac's father and brother had already moved to Midland, Michigan, so in April 1866 he decided to seek a better life for his family in Michigan too.

Isaac Franklin Bailey brought his wife and six children, ages 16 years to 6 months by train to Detroit, then to Ann Arbor where his uncle, Delos Smith, brother of his mother, Phoebe (Smith) Bailey met them and took them to his home near Horseshoe Lake. After a few days with him, Isaac Franklin Bailey rented a farm on Pontiac Trail near Sutton's Corners for two years. They then purchased a farm 1 1/2 miles north of Leland's Corners in Northfield Township for $9,000 and paid $2,000 down. This was quite an adventure for the oldest son, Myron. He was born November 14, 1849 and was not yet 17. His other brothers and sisters were: Charles, born 1851 who married Marion Shilton; Nelson, born 1852 who married Emma Pfeifle; Helen, born 1855 who married Thomas Worden; Albert, born 1862 who married Rachel Cone and Wilber, born 1865 who married Luella Curtis. Another child had been born to Isaac Franklin and Fannie (Parker) Bailey in 1854 but died soon after birth. In 1869 another son was born, the only one to be born in Northfield Township. He was named Isaac Franklin Bailey after his father.

The family attended the Leland Methodist Church and the children all attended the local school before leaving for high school in Ann Arbor. The mother, Fannie, died March 24, 1899 at the age of 70. Isaac Franklin died November 9, 1908 at the age of 84. Both were buried in Leland Cemetery, just 1 1/2 miles south of the homestead. Their son, Albert, took over the farm and two of Albert's children, who died young, are buried beside Isaac and Fannie.

Myron Bailey and Roxa Groves probably knew each other in the church and school activities. Myron attended Ann Arbor High School and Roxa the Normal School at Ypsilanti. After teaching one year Myron went to Midland to do some carpentry for his grandfather, Isaac Dodge Bailey, who was a physician there. After the wedding Myron took his wife to Midland where he had built a house.

Roxa was not very happy in Midland and had several frightening experiences. She lost her baby after falling on the ice and nearly lost her life also. She did have a girl later but soon afterwards they left Midland and bought a farm in Salem Township about five miles east of her former home. Six other children were born to them in Salem: Fanny (Frances), born 1874, married Louis Breitenwischer and lived in Lansing; Lillian, born 1876, married Arthur McCall and lived in Ann Arbor; Claude, born 1879, married Blanche VanAtta, lived in Detroit and Florida; Clayton, born 1881, married Adelaide Shaw and lived in Lansing; Ward, born 1883, drowned at age 15 in Whitmore Lake on Lapham Sunday picnic; Laban, born 1887, married (1) Clara Stolte, (2) Margaret Church and lived in East Lansing; Wilber, born 1897, married Evelyn Louise Partridge and lived in East Lansing. Clayton, Laban and Wilber practiced dentistry together in Lansing. The youngest, Wilber Edwin Bailey, was my father. The oldest son, Claude Bailey remained on the farm after Myron moved to Ann Arbor and married Blanche VanAtta, daughter of James and Huldah (Cole) VanAtta of Northfield Township. James had homesteaded on Earhart Road at 6 Mile. They had arranged for a public school to be built on their land there and this was where Blanche attended school and where Dorothy and Earl, their children also attended.

Many other courageous and enterprising families also lived in Northfield Township in the early days and I'm sure many interesting stories could be told. I have tried to tell something about the families I have come to call ancestors who lived mostly in the eastern part of the township.

IMMIGRANT MEMBERS OF ST. JOHN'S EV. LUTHERAN CHURCH, NORTHFIELD TOWNSHIP, WASHTENAW COUNTY, MICHIGAN

By Ronald O. Kapp

St. John's Lutheran Church of Northfield, established in 1869, was the last of some twenty congregations founded by the pioneer German Evangelical Lutheran missionary, Friedrich Schmid. Pastor Schmid was born (1807) in Waldorf, Württemberg, ordained in Baden (1833) and immediately sent to Washtenaw County in response to a call by several German Lutherans who had arrived in the county as early as 1828[1]. Pastor Schmid first preached in a log cabin four miles west of Ann Arbor on August 26, 1833. Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church of Scio Township was founded immediately thereafter.[2]

Preaching at St. Johannes Gemeinde of Northfield, as in all the other congregations founded by Pastor Schmid, was in the German language. Christian education, Sunday School classes and confirmation classes, were instrumental in both religious education and in teaching the German language to children and grandchildren of the pioneer families. The German language and cultural influence was thereby perpetuated for 75 to 100 years after the time of emigration. The tombstones in the church graveyards and public cemeteries alike were characterized by German inscriptions until the end of the nineteenth century, especially in an area bounded by Ann Arbor, Saline, Manchester, Chelsea and Dexter.

Though founded later than most of the German congregations, and located in an area where the German settlers were interspersed with Irish and English immigrants, St. John's of Northfield was originally comprised of German families.[3] As in the "reading" of cemeteries, church records serve as genealogical aides by revealing the names of early settlers and the specific German states from which they emigrated. This report grew out of research into church records done in response to an inquiry by a descendent of an early church member. In conjunction with a listing of the burials in the church cemetery, church records can serve as a genealogical resource. The specific objective of this listing is to reveal the German state or city from which the family emigrated and to provide the reader with a clue to the existence of family information which may be found in congregational records.

The following list is organized alphabetically with occasional notes translated from the records. The sources are primarily baptism, marriage and funeral records extending through approximately 1900. This listing includes only individuals whom the church records indicate were born abroad; with just a few exceptions the place of origin was Germany or Poland. All the entries were written in German script; varying quality of penmanship made deciphering certain place names difficult. Any uncertain entries are shown with a query (?).[4]

Of the 170 individuals listed above, 97 were born in Württemberg, the most southwesterly state in Germany whose capital is Stuttgart. Württemberg was an independent Kingdom until integrated into a single German state in 1871. The Wurttembergers, known as the Schwaben people, spoke a distinctive dialect (Schwäbisch), the most common household language of the early Luthern settlers.[5] The second most common area of origin was Prussia (26 individuals); because of the rapid expansion of the boundaries of Prussia in the 19th century, the exact origins of many of these families is uncertain.

Charter members of the congregation are shown with an asterisk (*) in the list above. Other charter members (whose birthplaces are not recorded in the church records) were:

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bender
Mr. and Mrs. George Kempf
Mr. and Mrs. John Gerlach
Mr. and Mrs. Schmid (Jacob?)
Mr. and Mrs. H. Wagner (Reinhardt?)
Mr. and Mrs. Gottlob Bessinger

Andrew Geiger
J. Fred Braun
M. Fahrner (Andreas?)
Gottfried Bauer
Andrew Rentschler
Dr. C. F. Kapp
Mr. Kern (Martin?)

SOME EARLY RECORDS OF ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH, NORTHFIELD TOWNSHIP, WASHTENAW COUNTY, MICHIGAN

Copied by N. H. Krohn

St. Patrick's of Northfield, the oldest English-speaking Catholic parish in the State of Michigan, was officially founded in 1831. The earliest records kept at the church begin with the first pastor-in-residence, Father Wallace (1864-1873). Most of the records from the first decades of the 1900s have been destroyed. The following entries, the beginning of those available, are printed with the kind permission of Sister Patricia O'Toole, IHM. The baptisms and burials have been translated into English previously by Father Patrick Jackson, pastor from 1871 until 1980.

Baptisms by Father Wallace

The complete September issue of Library Trends will be devoted to genealogy and libraries and it can be ordered separately. Price was quoted as $6.00, perhaps more if published as a hard back.

Neil D. Thompson, an attorney in New York City as well as a certified genealogist, discussed the "Middle Colonies: Families in Early New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland." His suggestions were to familiarize yourself with patterns of settlement, consult church records for the early period, and become familiar with the organizations of county and court records. Court records often include side information; for instance, in Maryland a grant once made is often known by its early name well into the 19th century, and quit rents continue to be paid to owners. State records are the most important single source for information as more people left wills, accounts, etc. Mr. Thompson also developed the sources of various areas.

Friday afternoon Friederich Wollmershauser, a professional genealogist from West Germany presented an interesting film about "Families in Germany: The Effect of Daily Life and Historical Times on Migration to America." Poor food, taxes, forced military service, plus letters from relatives in the United States telling of the good living in Pennsylvania were causes for migration from Germany. In some cases an illegitimate child caused parents to leave. In one case a couple, after having conceived, were put in jail. Later they married and afterward went to America. Couples were often ostracized and also, illegitimate children were unable to inherit.

Saturday was also a full day. Dean L. McLeod and David Mayfield, Director of LDS Library in Salt Lake City, indicated how one might make the most of Salt Lake City. Some facts you may not have heard at our recent meeting: If you are going to Salt Lake City, classes are offered on many topics and you can write in advance for a monthly class schedule for the month you expect to be there. Be sure to use reference consultants and not the tour guides to ask research questions. There is a new library under construction of 142,000 square feet to accomodate new technology. It is expected to be completed in 1985. Satellite transmission to the branches is planned. The library is having trouble with other individuals and companies capitalizing on their resources. Be sure any correspondence from Salt Lake City is from the library.

Fred Tarpley presented an interesting discussion concerning "Names and Naming Patterns: Their Significance in Genealogy." He developed three categories of names: surnames, personal first and middle names, and place and street names. From Social Security data there are said to be one and one-third million different surnames in the United States alone. For place names the United States Geological Survey has put on computer all map names. One can purchase a print-out. He provided a bibliography and suggested one read Elsdon Smith's American Surnames. This lists 2000 most common surnames in the United States as listed by the Social Security Administration in 1964, including the number of accounts for each surname. Also suggested was George R. Stewart's Names on the Land, 1945. The Journal of the American Name Society has also published bibliographies of surnames and place names.

I found it very worthwhile to attend this National Conference as there were many valuable speeches, exhibits and brochures. I bought some tapes including Donna Reid Hotaling's talk, "Ireland: Methods and Sources for Locating Families," and can play them if we have time and you wish to hear them.
